

Spiritual, Moral, Social and Cultural Links

When teaching Geography, we contribute to the children's spiritual development and citizenship wherever possible. Throughout their Geography learning at Poulton St Chad's, the children will learn about their responsibilities towards their community and environment, and the richness of other cultures to promote tolerance and understanding.

Our Geography curriculum directly fosters Spiritual, Moral, Social, and Cultural development by encouraging reflection on diverse cultures and places, fostering respect for the environment and different perspectives, and developing a sense of global citizenship through understanding interdependence and local and global issues. We further develop these skills through investigations into places, people, and cultures and in doing so, the children gain a deeper understanding of themselves and others, promoting their spiritual, moral, and social awareness as well as their cultural knowledge and appreciation.
